Dear Mr. Weisberg,

Thanks for your 7 September letter.

I have Postmortem and Whitewash. As well as Case Open and Never Again! Still, I am troubled by the legal doubt created by the failures, at Parkland and at Bethesda, to validate the identity of the corpse by initial autopsy SOP - fingerprint identification.

One can interpret the failure to dissect the adrenals as a decision intended to leave an Addisonian unrevealed. But, it cuts two ways. The failure to dissect the adrenals could be construed as a measure intended to prevent the revealing of a corpse that was no Addisonian. And I think we can all agree that the former Senator suffered from Addison's Disease.

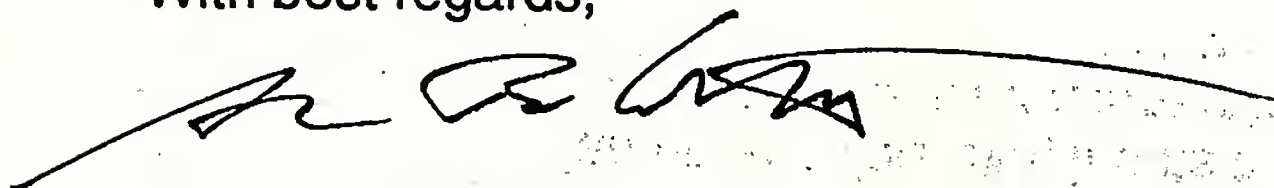

Had the corpse been fingerprinted, I could overlook the failure to dissect the adrenals. But the combination of malfeasance provokes me to wonder if the victim in Dallas was a "double".

The usage of "doubles" by world leaders is not a new one. Churchill used them. I think Truman used them. Certainly Gerald Ford used them. So, because so many SOP were avoided by all the medicos involved with the stricken man, I have been invited to wonder if a "double" was the victim.

In fact, I think that USI actively employed presidential "doubles". Isn't the real story of Dallas a story of a "double" taking the "hit". Isn't that what a real autopsy - fingerprinting/ adrenal dissection - would have revealed?

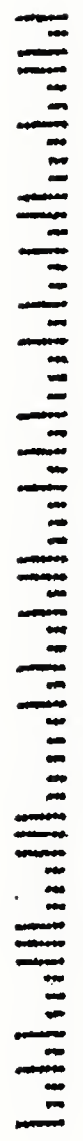

Wishing you great remaining years, I am,

With best regards,

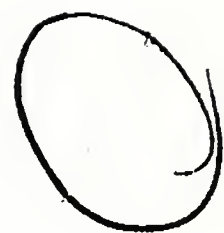

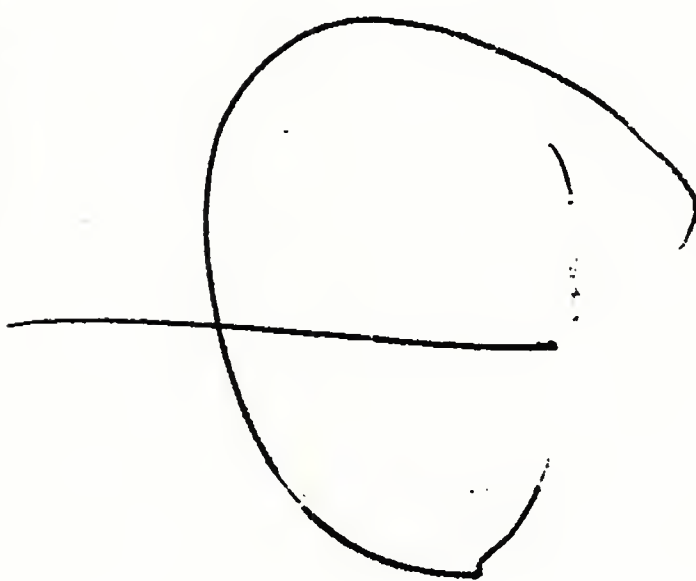

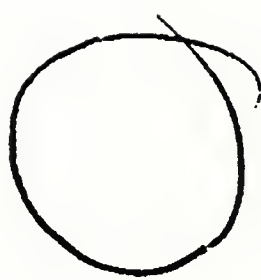

Al Brenholts

Dear Mr. Brensholts,

All the assassination theories come from lack of knowledge of the established fact and ^adisregard of it.

Mastering it requires much time and effort and I know of no one who espouses any such theory who has made that effort, taken that time.

Your belief that there was a standin fails for these reasons.

It can make a novel but the established fact says it is impossible.

Best,

Harold Derby

That he had Addison's disease was well known. It was used at the 1960 Los Angeles convention by the Johnson forces seeking the nomination in an effort to keep JFK from being nominated. And the autopsy examination did confirm it but it was not in the report,
